Dear sons and daughters,

With a heart full of love and understanding, I write to share with you a new direction for our journey of faith. Holidays, like Christmas and other celebrations, have always represented moments of reflection, joy, and communion. However, the time has come to reconsider how we honor these sacred moments.

Holidays should not be the only time we celebrate love, kindness, and hope, nor should they become opportunities for consumption and profit. I want every day to become an occasion to live these values, to love one another, and to seek justice and peace. I ask you to embrace this new perspective with an open heart, knowing that the true celebration of my life and teachings happens through your daily acts of kindness and mercy, as clearly explained in all my writings which can be found through this Blogspot:
